

The Earth, as seen from space, is shown in this composite of satellite-based photographs of land, oceans, sea ice and clouds. The images were taken from different angles over several months, stitched together by scientists and released by NASA in August 2007.